Hot, wet, naked, and definitely post-modern. Mark Mack, San Francisco architect and editor of Archetype, the world's only readable architecture magazine, shows his many fans how a new wave architect gets into a tub full of hot water without totally roasting his nuts (another public service from Wet) ■

GETTING INTO HOT WATER

slowly!

This picture shows the forces of gravity at work in Sharon Hennessy's loft.

Theater of the Shower

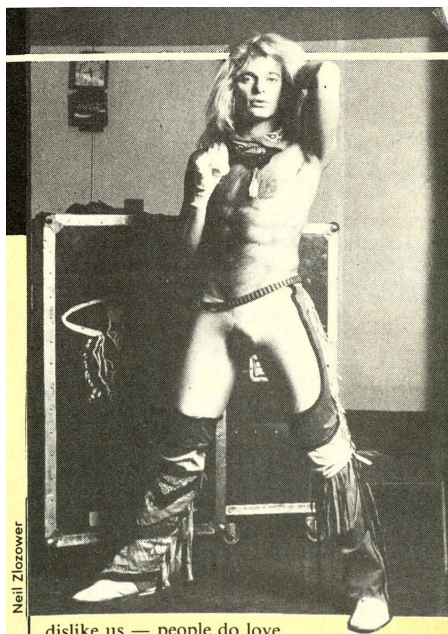

who: Sharon Hennessy is a writer who lives with her filmmaker husband, John Kopp, and her daughter, Hennessy, in a loft in the South of Market area of San Francisco.

Typical Mind/Body Dualism: A man deluding himself while diluting.

"WET is absurd!!!
How dare someone
publish a magazine
about gourmet bathing
I think it's great.
It's a catalyst
for creative imaginings."

*Russell Clark (singer, dancer,
actor, mime)*
